Could someone give me step by step instructions on how to Overclock my Intel Celeron E3200 on a GigaByte GA-EP41-UD3L M/Board 3x 1GB Crucial Ballistix DDR2 RAM. It's a Celeron Wolfdale, don't do it! It's not much different from your E2180 (1mb L2 cache). If you want to upgrade your CPU, a quad should be right up your alley. 6ghz only required a little more than stock voltage and was fine on the stock cooler. I am not sure what voltage options you have in your Bios, will it let you change it?

I'm sure Bios. I agree, the E3200, as an el cheapie celeron, is not far behind an E5200, but still lags that chip by 5 to 10%#. 02Ghz i have tried with the features of the board but no luck just fails to boot and resets the cmos to default i. This will be my first overclocking project and i will attach pics of the stock settings just need to know how to slowly overclock this chip. I dont think celerons are unlocked, so just start pumping that FSB while keeping memory dividers within rated spec, until.
