

German battery energy storage project

Overview

Germany is set to host Europe's largest battery energy storage project, with a new grid-scale facility planned for the Lusatia region. The project is being developed by Fluence Energy, a U. -based energy storage technology provider, and will be transferred to LEAG Clean. High and further increasing volatility of power prices due to the expansion of renewables on the one hand and significantly decreasing prices for battery cells in recent years on the other hand have led to a highly attractive market environment for battery storage (BESS) projects in Germany. The. The new procedure replaces the previously applicable first-come, first-served principle for grid connections of large plants with a capacity of 100 MW or more. The initial information and application phase is scheduled to begin on April 1. Any pending grid connection requests will be transferred to. A trio of large-scale BESS announcements by major power firms of 700-800MWh capacity each in Germany show the country's energy storage market moving into the new era of scale. The.
